Accessibility Score: ★★☆☆☆

PlayerUnknown's Battlegrounds is an intense survival shooter—wide open maps, tense firefights, and a shrinking safe zone. For blind players, success relies on audio-based navigation, environmental memory, and tactical positioning to stay alive until the final circle.

Audio Mapping the Battleground

- Start Small: Play smaller maps like Sanhok to learn terrain before attempting large ones like Erangel.
- Break the Map Into Landmarks: Memorize key locations—buildings, bridges, rivers—and the soundscapes that define them.
- Follow Terrain Cues: Hills create muffled sound, while roads and open ground give clearer echoes.
- Drop Zone Familiarity: Pick a consistent landing spot so you can navigate it without visual reference.

Listening is Your Survival Radar

- Footsteps: Distinct for different surfaces—wood, grass, metal rooftops—helping you know both distance and direction.
- Gunfire Recognition: Learn each weapon's sound to judge range—distant snipers vs. close automatic fire.
- Vehicle Cues: Engine pitch and direction tell you if a car is approaching or leaving.
- Zone Warnings: The blue zone emits a hum when nearby; explosions from the red zone have a predictable cadence.

Landing & Early Game Without Vision

- Stick With a Partner: Follow their landing sounds to touch down safely.
- Loot by Audio: Inventory actions, weapon pickup clicks, and ammo loading sounds confirm looting progress.
- Secure a Safe Room: Early defense is easier in buildings where you can hear entry points clearly.

PUBG

Mid-Game Movement & Combat

- Route Planning: Move along roads or walls to stay oriented.
- Sound Baits: Fire a few shots to lure enemies, then reposition based on their return fire.
- Close-Quarters Weapons: SMGs and shotguns excel in buildings where audio cues dominate.
- Pre-Fire at Known Entry Points: If you hear steps approaching through a door, shoot before they peek.

Endgame Tactics for Blind Players

- SMGs: UMP45 or Vector—low recoil, high fire rate.
- Shotguns: S1897 or S12K—deadly at close range.
- Throwables: Frag grenades for sound baits, stun grenades to disrupt opponents.
- Armor Priority: Level 2+ helmet and vest for extra survival time in close fights.

Communication & Team Coordination

- Clear Callouts: Teammates should give precise directions like “enemy at 2 o’clock, 10 meters.”
- Loot Sharing: Have teammates guide you to weapons and healing items you need.
- Circle Awareness: Teammates can call out when to move and which safe zone route is best.

Practice Survival Instincts

- Custom Games: Practice in bot matches to build sound-based tracking skills.
- Vehicle Familiarity: Learn the sound of each vehicle to judge mobility options.
- Circle Prediction: Memorize common safe zone shifts to anticipate movement.
