

Fall Guys

Accessibility Score: ★★☆☆☆

Fall Guys is a festival of unpredictable chaos—bright colors, bouncy obstacles, and stampedes of beans. For blind players, your powers will be rhythm, spatial memory, audio cues, and obstacle awareness. With practice, the pandemonium becomes a patterned dance you can master.

Obstacle Awareness: Feel the Flow of the Course

- Start Small: Pick one or two rounds (like “Hit Parade” or “Dizzy Heights”) to focus on first.
- Audio Study: Watch gameplay with good commentary or audio descriptions. Pay attention to obstacle sounds like spinning fans, seesaws creaking, or slime splashes.
- Break It Down: Mentally divide the course into “zones” (start section, mid obstacle cluster, final sprint).
- Pattern Memory: Each obstacle has a rhythm—learn when to move or pause by timing the sounds.

Listening Is Winning: Your Sound Map

- Footstep Differences: Surfaces sound distinct—slime squelches, conveyor belts hum, trampolines give a boing.
- Crowd Tracking: Competitors’ footsteps and bump sounds help you stay with the pack (a great navigation anchor).
- Hazard Alerts: Listen for swinging pendulum whooshes, fan rotations, or the pop of falling fruit.
- Finish Line Energy: The cheering crowd and music shift when you’re near the goal.

Mastering Movement Without Sight

- Straight Line Dash: Lightly push the stick forward and adjust only when bumping into obstacles—too much correction wastes time.
- Wall Follow: In maze-like stages (e.g., “Door Dash”), gently brushing a wall can keep you oriented.

Fall Guys

- Grab for Glory: Holding grab near the finish can stop pushes or help in tail-grab rounds.
- Jump & Dive Timing: Learn the sound of your character's jump grunt and the slightly delayed dive impact.

Team Game Tactics Without Vision

- Rely on Voice Chat: Let teammates guide you toward the ball in "Fall Ball" or enemies in "Jinxed."
- Anchor Roles: Stay near a goal or specific zone so your movement pattern is predictable and efficient.
- Audio Positioning: Use the directional sound of the ball bounce or tail grab swish to orient yourself.

Round-Specific Blind Play Strategies

- Race Rounds (Hit Parade, Whirlygig): Stick to the middle lanes—fewer lateral turns.
- Survival Rounds (Block Party, Roll Out): Move slowly and listen for obstacle approach cues.
- Logic Rounds (Perfect Match): Memorize the tile positions verbally ("grape on left, orange ahead")—pair with a guide if possible.
- Finals (Hex-A-Gone, Fall Mountain): In Hex-A-Gone, walk in small circles to avoid big falls; in Fall Mountain, hug one wall for navigation consistency.

Practice Makes Pattern

Set up custom lobbies or join friends in private matches for repetition. Play each map multiple times to build muscle memory. Use spectate mode after elimination to keep learning obstacle sounds.
